LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

Dear Students, Faculty and Families of MVRHS,

Thanks to each and every one of you for making 2015 a truly incredible year. We have all made it through, past the SATs and freshmen year, past the new teachers and hard tests, past the enormous amount of snow days and early mornings. Even though high school can be hard at times, the four years we spend at MVRHS is defined by our individual choices and potential. Whether it's the Nantucket football games, the play Into The Woods, prom, art club, jazz band, newspaper, seeing new faces in the halls, best friends or even the endless silly drama, we will miss it all. High School is something we live through way too fast, and in seconds will slip out of our fingers and become memories. In a few years, some of us may not remember what it's like to be in a chemistry class, or learning to throw on the wheel. MVRHS provides each and every student with opportunities that are hard to come across in life.

This year, we wanted to represent every part of our student body in the best way possible. That's why this year's book could be referred to as "MVRHS: The Year In Pictures". With a grand total of over 1,830 pictures, we set out to capture the year in a beautiful and vivid way.

We would personally like to thank the faculty for allowing us to steal some of their students during class for pictures. We would also like to thank them for taking pictures themselves and even modeling when necessary. The staff at MVRHS are not only great teachers, but great people and have been inspirations to their students.

The students also deserve a big thank you, for putting up with our many photo shoots in the cafeteria and around the school. Thank you to the students willing to get their picture taken and even to the ones a little more camera shy, for stepping out of their comfort zones.

Finally, we would like to thank all the parents for receiving and responding to countless emails and always being being helpful, no matter what the task. Special thanks to Robin Davies for some of the sports photos, Jocelyn Filley for the Prom photos, and Ms. Thibadeau for "Into the Woods" and "Twelfth Night" pictures. Also thank you to Mr.Baer for his photography and software guidance and of course to our amazing faculty advisor Ms. Todd for her countless hours of dedication to this book. We could not have created this book without any of these people! Thank you everyone for your time and patience, and enjoy all the moments and memories recorded here in this book from MVRHS, 2015.

- Aaron & Courtney

LETTER FROM THE PRINCIPAL

Congratulations to the MVRHS Class of 2015!

Your experience at MVRHS has been based on the fundamental premise that every one of you is capable of achieving academic success; of being self-reliant; and of being a positive and productive contributor to our society. Therefore, we have been unwavering in preparing you to confidently meet the challenges that await you upon graduation.

Your unique smiles and tears will forever be part of walls of MVRHS. So cherish the memories of your friendships and class trips; of staying after and your echoing laughter. But most importantly, remember your hard work and dedication as you now pursue your future goals. Live life and pilot your own course; don't be a passenger. Learn every day; you may learn something new about yourself. And, above all, love each waking day and love yourself.

Sincerely,

Gil Traverso

ONE WORLD TRIP

NEW YORK CITY 2015

This club was created in 2011 with a mission of building community and breaking down barriers between our various student groups. The club has worked very hard to build a better school climate and has recieved an award from the Teaching Tolerance organization in 2015 in recognition of its role in initiating conversation about stereotyping and contributing to a more unified school environment. The club, with the Brazilian History and Culture class, organizes and sponsors the annual Brazilian American Friendship Lunch and participates in an annual cultural exchange program with the High School of Economics and Finance in New York. The program involves students from MVRHS visiting their New York host school and exploring cultural icons while in the city, and the New Yorkers then visit MVRHS where they participate in a typical school day and then tour the African American Heritage Trailt, and visit various cultural sites.

The High School View

The High School View is staffed and prepared entirely by students from the Martha's Vineyard Regional High School, and published on their behalf by The Martha's Vineyard Times, with the generous assistance of the sponsors whose names appear below

Peers learn to lend a helping hand

BY RUSSELL SHAPIRO

Two by two, the students and teachers walked to the center of the circle, said a few words, handed each other a shirt, and returned to their seats. With this informal ceremony, the Peer Outreach retreat came to a close. On October 28 and 29, more than 50 students and teachers from the high school participated in the retreat, held at Alex's Place in the YMCA of Martha's Vineyard. The retreat's purpose was to teach all participants, each of whom was chosen by fellow students, how to make the school a safer place, and how to better deal with issues among their peers.

The program began nine years ago with instruction from the director of guidance Mike McCarthy to newly hired adjustment counselor Amy Lilavois. "I had the basis from a similar program at a school Mr. McCarthy previously worked at in Connecticut," said Ms. Lilavois. "The idea behind it was to make the school safer and more compassionate."

In order to create a diverse and representative group, a key component of Peer Outreach has been that its members are selected by a student vote. Ms. Lilavois said, "The thing that's so important is that it's peer nominated, so you get students from all social circles. It's not a popularity contest. Students nominate those people that they truly feel comfortable talking to."

The hope behind Peer Outreach is to more adequately equip each student and teacher involved in the program with the tools to recognize and remedy issues among their peers. Some of the key skills that are taught throughout the retreat are how to be a better listener, how to address when someone may need help, and how to diagnose the severity of an issue.

Senior Galya Walt, a student facilitator for this year's retreat, said, "It's a time to reflect on how we treat others, and how we are as friends. It also teaches students about the severity of certain issues they may think they can handle, and encourages them to find an adult." Senior Kyle Dostal, also a facilitator this year, echoed a similar sentiment as he said, "It makes the school safer by teaching kids how to handle difficult situations."

The program has made a notable difference throughout the school, and on the individuals who take part in the retreat. Senior Dunovan Belisle, a participant in this year's retreat, said, "Coming out of the retreat, I feel much more comfortable helping people with their problems."

Galya shared a similar statement, as she said, "I don't know if more people will come to me to talk, although I hope they would, but it definitely made me a better listener and more aware of subtle cues that indicate someone needs help."

Junior Kaitlyn Marchand said, "I learned a lot about myself and how to be a good friend to others and be a good, attentive listener."

Special education teacher Ryan Kent said, "A key component for me was the opportunity to learn and work with students I may never have had a chance to work with. I now know way more students and can access them for support just as far more students know me and can find me if needed."

Due to funding and logistical issues, it would be nearly impossible to have each and every student in the high school go through the program, though Ms. Lilavois regrets that it is not possible. "I wish that every student could take part," she said, "though it is great that there are even 100 students who might now approach me for help with an issue, that might not have in the past."

Mr. Kent said, "Those who attended now know each other on a different level. We shared a common experience and grew together as a result."

There is an effort this year to make the group even more inclusive, though. With the help of a few members of Peer Outreach, Ms. Lilavois has started Peer Outreach Club, which meets after school on Thursdays, and is open to all who wish to come. The goal of the club is to teach many of the skills learned in the retreat, and participate in meaningful discussion about issues throughout the school.

Martha's Vineyard Regional High School Peer Outreach has left a lasting impact on the atmosphere of the building in which its members study and work. Its founder, Ms. Lilavois, said. "I think our school would be a very different place without it. I really do think my number one referral source is students. I think our school is unique in that so many students come to guidance and teachers with their problems." The experience from the Peer Outreach retreat has had long-lasting impacts for many participants, teaching skills that they may use for life. Ms. Lilavois said, "I have a lot of kids who tell me that they still use the skills they learned. They're just important skills for all types of relationships." HSV

Student members of the high school's National Honor Society (NHS) organized a Halloween party at Windemere Nursing and Rehabilitation Center for the residents. The party consisted of a performance by the Minnesingers, a game of trivia, and a multitude of laughs over cake and punch.

Every quarter, the National Honor Society puts together community outreach and service projects. Senior Charlotte Potter, a member of the NHS said, "We thought that the gathering would be a fun way to brighten up the residents' day." She also said, "We broke up into committees a month ago. There was one for decorations, one for trivia, and one for costumes. We also invited the Minnesingers. We started planning the event at the beginning of September."

The NHS chapter advisor and special needs teacher Jean Neble said, "Windemere is the members' community project. They plan on throwing an event for most holidays, and every year the NHS throws the residents a senior prom."

Windemere's memory care coordinator, Mary Holmes, said, "I think it's a great event, and I was very impressed with how prepared the students came. The residents love being around the young kids and feeling like a part of the community. We are also always looking for volunteers to come in and visit with the residents."

The residents of Windemere had a chance to enjoy three songs performed by members of the high school's Minnesingers. One of the Minnesingers, senior Aaron Teves said, "We perform a section of our holiday ensemble every year for the seniors at Windemere."

Senior Samantha Potter, president of the National Honor Society chapter and a weekly volunteer at Windemere, said, "I really like the event. I think it's a great opportunity for us to give back to the people who have already given our community so much."

Windemere resident Norma Gaudreau said, "My favorite part of this is listening to and watching people sing and enjoy themselves. I also enjoy seeing the kids, and I'm very glad to see them take an interest in us." HSV

Aquaphobic Cerulean Self-Destruction

by BRIANNA PATE

She said that if she really wanted ,
she really couldn't feel pain anymore . • Her maniacal cackling that disturbing , howling laughter- rang out endlessly as steel soared through the air, as she, in her unrelenting madness, succumbed to what she'd brought upon herself. The girl of aquatic symphonies with all of her blue hope could not save anyone .
She watched the notes fall and slip through her fingers to become scattered among selfish wishes in the sea that she had cursed with grief and she had none to blame but herself.
And while her friends fell as doomed heroes,
she lived long enough
on her lone, monochrome stage , to see herself become one of the villains-
a manifest of her own miserable cerulean screams .

Asheyes

by SOFIA DE GEOFROY

He was 15 and Arthur kissed him and stars were dying and black holes were expanding and trees were going up in flames everywhere to his left to his right and tears were making Pim's eyes blurry and sightless but he was pressing his thin fingers so strongly against Arthur's face that he was sure the skin vvould turn white for a moment when he pulled away and his eyes were blurry and his blood was blurry and the ash in the sky was blurry.

Pim knew then it was true- that he wanted every human to go away. To die, to be buried in the debris and buried among the corpses whose necks they had slit themselves and be buried in the shit they had polished and hidden for all these years. To visit Hades and laugh at discord and it would be only him and Arthur and they could live in peace without those disgusting scum monsters who kill everything they touch. They weren't human they were a failed experiment a failed experiment who did this and Arthur had the fingers of his right hand running in the grooves of Pim's rib-cage and everything was horrible but everything was ok and it was burning and there was fire inside of Pim and outside and he could smell the smoke everywhere and his nose had tunnels of chalk and charcoal. His eyes were burning and his retinas were flashing and the entire earth was floating and shivering and melting flesh and he just wanted rain to calm down the horror but this was a drought and his eyes held all the rain in the world and it was going down his face and making his black cheeks grey and his lips couldn't stay still as much as he wanted.

Utopia Moderna

by MARGARET JOBA-WOODRUFF

Maybe, if we were ants, we could look up at the stars and know the context of the universe. And maybe, we'd see that those billions of sparkling dots would forever be more beautiful and exquisite than any of us could ever be. And maybe we could look at each other and say, gee, don't I know you? And we'd look at our troubles and we'd knock 'em dead. We'd punch holes through their pathetic faces!

If we were ants, we'd know that there are one quadrillion, twenty two trillion, seven billion, fortysix million of us on the planet. And we'd know what our purpose in life would be. And we'd know the stupidity of looking in the mirror and smiling back at ourselves. Or the obnoxiousness of selftaken photographs or the outrageous obsession everybody seems to have with body building or internet blogging. And maybe we could all get over how distinctly more attractive we are than everybody else and maybe, just maybe, we could eliminate the possibility of the growing numbers of us who believe inside that they are God's gift to the universe.

And when where would we be? No modeling agencies and no TV. And is that the world we wanna be? I may be mistaken, but I thought I just heard the thunder of a thousand people calling out as the glass covers of their iPhone's shatter into 70 individual pieces.

Heights

by SOFIA McCARRON

I read somewhere that the reason people hate heights is not because they are afraid of how high they are, but the possibility that the allure of jumping would overcome their common sense and they would leap away from the edge. That's where I told myself my fear stemmed from. Today, however, I stood with my feet half on the.steel support, half in the open air that swept over the Hudson River. I conquered my fear by scaling the iron that daily ushers thousands of people in and out of the city, and soon I will fear nothing. When I won't show up for school tomorrow, they will worry but not fear yet. When they find the note on my pillow, on.paper torn out of my biology notebook, then fear will present itself in rolling waves of nausea accompanied by the hope that they are not too late or that this whole affair is a dream. They will act like victims of a house fire rushing about or staring up in horror as their lives go up in smoke. Maybe my body will wash up by a pier, and the poor soul who is destined to find me will scream. And then my mother will scream, and my friends who weren't really my friends will scream. And then they will finally believe what I've been saying all along. And some might shed a few tears, like my mother and father for the colossal fuckups they have been, or my sister, maybe she will finally be sorry for all the shit she pulled. But I don't know and I never will know if they will do any of these things. Maybe I won't even have a funeral. I assume that I will, as most people do, even if they come from behind a white picket fence or barbed wire. And dear God, we all know how hard Mom tried to be like most people, with the block parties and the minivans and the blown-out hair that she swears has never faded from the platinum blonde that it wa in high school.

Minnesingers tour southern Spain

BY CASEY MCANDREWS, KAELA VECCHIA-ZEITZ

The regional high school Minnesingers said adios to America and hola to Spain during the April break. They traveled throughout southern Spain, embracing every opportunity to sing. From singing in famous cathedrals to quaint little restaurants, the Minnesingers got a taste of Spanish culture.

The Minnesingers sang at the Sunday Mass at the Mosque-Cathedral of Córdoba. Senior Caley Bennett said, "My favorite moment was probably singing at the Mass and just thinking of all the history that was there." The Mosque-Cathedral was completed in 987 AD. The contrasts in architecture throughout the structure reflect the vast number of time periods that the building has gone through.

Senior Grant Santos reflected on the experience of singing at the Mass. He said, "There was an elderly woman who I talked to in Spanish before the Mass, and when we went down for a group photo at the altar, I saw her, and she smiled and blew a kiss at me. She truly loved our performance at the Mass, and that was a really humbling experience."

The Minnesingers also performed in a friendship concert at a church in Granada. An all women's choir sang after the Minnesingers' performance. The two choral groups went out to dinner following the performance. Beatriz Mateo, a member of the women's choir, said, "It was a beautiful interaction. Singing is not a thing where you try to be better than someone. So for us it was a pleasure to sing with the Minnesingers. I believe that music is not a competition, it's just a way to express things that maybe speaking cannot do. The Minnesingers sounded like angels."

Caley talked about the benefits of traveling to Europe with the Minnesingers. She said, "I feel like traveling gives me a new understanding of my own culture. It definitely made me think about how fast paced Americans are with everything, even with eating lunch. I know that the service was slow in Spain, but it really gave us a chance to talk to each other and connect. It made me look at my culture through new eyes."

Caley commented on the trip as a whole. She said, "There are so many people in Minnesingers who I would never have met or even talked to but are now my best friends. I think it's really amazing how there are all different kinds of kids in the group but somehow we all are friends and enjoy hanging out with each other."

Junior Penelope Dutton shared her enjoyment of the Spanish lifestyle. She said, "My favorite part of the trip was getting to experience this entirely new culture. Being on the Island, you know everywhere so well that it's hard to find someplace that isn't familiar, but everywhere in Spain was completely different. Every building had some sort of history to it, and each city, each street, was so much different from the last. Plus, the views were amazing, so that was a big bonus. The amount of personality in each building was absolutely beautiful." HSV

Shakespeare's 'Twelfth Night' opens tomorrow

PHOTOS BY KRISTINE HOPKINS

BY KAELA VECCHIA-ZEITZ

Students in the high school's theater department will perform three shows of Twelfth Night this coming weekend. Theater teacher Brooke Hardman will direct the play.

Ms. Hardman is a member of the Actors' Shakespeare Project, a company based in Boston. She said, "I love Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, and when I talked to the students they were really enthusiastic about it. I definitely want to continue putting on Shakespeare plays at the high school. I feel that it's important for high school students to perform Shakespeare plays so they can really understand the work. The English department teaches a number of Shakespeare's plays, and presenting a production of a play reinforces the curriculum. It's really just a natural fit."

Showtimes are Friday, May 1, at 8 pm, Saturday, May 2 ,at 8 pm, and Sunday, May 3, at 2 pm. Admission is free to all. HSV

Competition ignites innovation

BY WILLA VIGNEAULT

Thanks to an engineering program, students are learning to be innovative and creative. Accurately titled "Engineering Challenge," the group has met after school for the past seven months, on the last Thursday of each month. They are given 45 minutes to design and accomplish a goal with the materials given.

Chemistry teacher and engineering challenge advisor Natalie Munn said, "[We are trying] to provide students a different type of academic competition, other than science fair, and to promote engineering."

Challenges this year included noise-reducing headphones, a broom to sweep up cat litter, a hanging chandelier, and a box with as many latches as possible to hold M&Ms.

Senior and overall girls' winner Willow Wunsch commented on the challenges given. She said, "I liked the spontaneity of just walking into the room and being presented with random materials and a goal. It was fun having to think on my feet and compete against other students."

Senior Tim Roberts, the overall boys' winner, said, "I think I am going to study engineering in college, and this was a fun and engaging way to start preparing for it."

About 40 people participate overall, 20 of whom are regulars; some only come once or twice, in between sports or other clubs. "It's nice," Dr. Munn said, "because students have the flexibility to come once and try it out, or come every time to compete and win awards."

Tim added, "The challenges provide an exciting way to get some experience not only with engineering, but also with working as a team, which is always important later in life."

The final challenge took place on April 9, where the winners of the overall challenge were announced. Tim Roberts won for the boys, and Willow Wunsch was the girls' winner. Eli Hanschka and Elizabeth O'Brien were in second place followed by Christopher Aring, Zachary Bresnick, Connor Downing, Russell Shapiro, Maddy Moore, and Ellie Reagan in third place, and Kevin Montamhault and Emily Moore with honorable mentions.

Dr. Munn added, "It diversifies experiences in science that students aren't normally offered, and helps them connect with other like-minded students while working in small groups toward a single goal." HSV

FRESHMEN

KAYLA OLIVER

Yearbook: Hi, what's your name?

Kayla: Kayla Oliver.

Yearbook: How old are you?

Kayla: I'm fourteen.

Yearbook: Do you have any pets?

Kayla: I have two dogs, a cat, a chinchilla and a lizard.

Yearbook: What's your chinchilla's name?

Kayla: Snowball.

Yearbook: Awwww. Is it white?

Kayla: Yeah (laughs)

Yearbook: What's your favorite color?

Kayla: Purple.

Yearbook: Do you play any sports?

Kayla: Yeah, I cheerlead and I do softball.

Yearbook: What's cheerleading like?

Kayla: It's pretty good. I mean I've been doing it for three years during junior high and I hope to get four years, then I get seven years of cheerleading. I'm going to end up doing it in college.

Yearbook: Oh cool! Do you have any siblings?

Kayla: I have an older brother named Jacob Oliver.

Yearbook: If you could have any hair color what would it be?

Kayla: Probably red.

Yearbook: If you could live anywhere in the world where would it be?

Kayla: I would live in England.

Yearbook: Why?

Kayla: Because I went there for 8th grade and I was just really fascinated by it.

NIC ANDRE

Yearbook: Hi what's your name?

Nic: My name is Nic Andre.

Yearbook: Whats's your favorite food?

Nic: Pasta.

Yearbook: Do you play sports?

Nic: Yes, I do.

Yearbook: What sports?

Nic: Soccer.

Yearbook: What are your hobbies?

Nic: I like to play soccer.

Yearbook: Do you go to any cool places for soccer?

Nic: Yes. I went to Florida last year for a tournament and we went to Scotland and the Netherlands.

Yearbook: Woah that's so cool! Did you like Scotland or the Netherlands better?

Nic: Defiantly the Netherlands.

Yearbook: Why?

Nic: Scotland had really crappier weather and (laughs) we played more games in the Netherlands and that was more fun.

Yearbook: Did you win the games?

Nic: We did, yes.

Yearbook: Good! Are you a goal scorer?

Nic: I am not, no. (laughs)

Yearbook; What position do you play?

Nic: I play center defender.

Yearbook: Oh, then that makes sense! Do you take people out?

Nic: Yeah, I dislocated a kid's jaw yesterday.

Yearbook: How?

Nic: I just like hit him. He was coming near me and I hit him and he started like bleeding out of his mouth.

Yearbook: Owww

Nic: Yeah I'm not really a mean person, he was just bugging me all game.

Yearbook: So you just took him out?

Nic: Took him out.

JUNIORS

MEGAN PICHE

Yearbook: What is your name and what grade are you in?

Megan Piche: My name's Megan Piche and I'm a Junior.

Yearbook: What extracurricular activities do you do?

Megan Piche: I play field hockey, I'm a minnesinger customer, and I perform in the school musicals, and I have participated in the massachusetts educational theater gilt festival last year.

Yearbook: Jeez you kinda do a lot.

Megan Piche: I do.

Yearbook: Okay what's one memory you'll never forget about this field hockey season?

Megan Piche: Um probably going to tournament, and how we got to tournament. And the love and support that everyone had for each other and I would just say the experience of going to tournament was really fun and I thought it was really memorable. So yeah.

Yearbook: Cute, do you have any weird talents?

Megan Piche: Not really, but I have an identical twin and we can do this thing together, like sort of like read each others minds almost. It's kind of weird.

Yearbook: Like how? Give me an example.

Megan Piche: Like, I don't know, there's like a thing where if she feels pain, I sometimes feel pain. Like it happened when we were younger, I had surgery on my face or whatever and like, she felt something weird or whatever. It's not really like a talent, I'm like a twin. But we can both mimic each other's voices that's kind of a talent.

Yearbook: Like completely?

Megan Piche: Yeah, like I can say a sentence and she can say it back to me and it'll sound exactly the same.

Yearbook: That's so cool. Like you can look exactly the same and sound exactly the same!

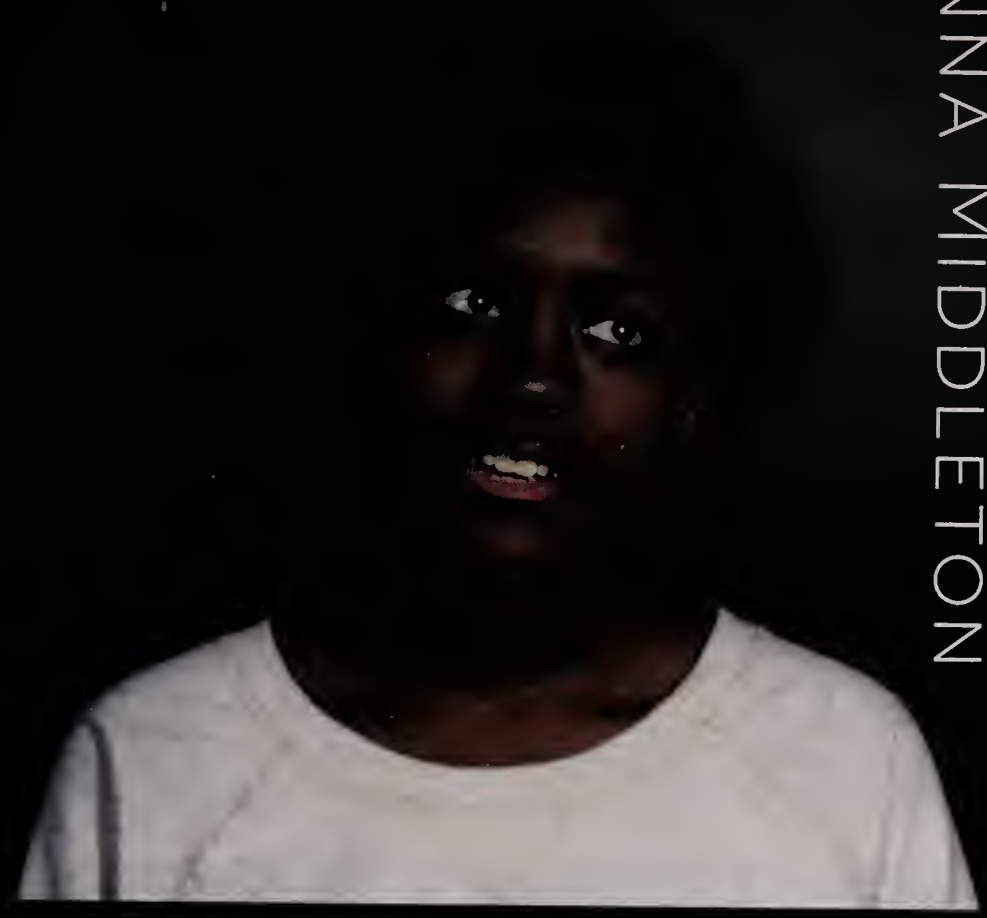

Megan Piche: Pretty much! I almost went as her for Halloween.

Yearbook: You would've barely had to do anything.

Megan Piche: That's why I almost did it.

Yearbook: Yep you've got the right idea. What's your favorite holiday and why?

Megan Piche: Christmas, because I really like the atmosphere that christmas brings, and like all the lights, and ya know, family, the good food, and just like happiness of just like giving your friends gifts and just like seeing people happy.
Yearbook: Oh I know Christmas is so great I love it. Okay. The end.

DAYANNA MIDDLETON

Yearbook: What's your favorite memory in school?

Dayanna: Ahh ok so this is gunna be really general but i wanna say Mr. D's math class, probably has some of the better memories.

Yearbook: Whats your favorite genre of music?

Dayanna: I'm going to say....Indie Rock I don't know uhh

Yearbook: What's your favorite tv show?

Dayanna: Constantine! thats my show.

Yearbook: Whats your favorite holiday?

Dayanna: Christmas.

Yearbook: What's your favorite class

Dayanna: Ohh, ahh probably art class... Drawing and Painting! for sure.

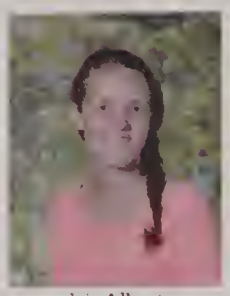

Yearbook: What's your favorite club?
Dayanna: Sea Breezes, definitely i just love it.

ADDISON GEIGER

Addison Geiger
Do you have a strange talent?
Um....I'm wearing two different shoes.
What's your biggest pet peeve?
Ahhh....unsquare squares. I don't know.
What do you have Siri call you?
President Obama.
What's your spirit animal?
Platipus.
What are you most scared of?
Drowning.
What's your least favorite word?
Finagle.
Why?
Because it's finagle.

ERIK FABER

Yearook: What's your name Erik?

Erik: What's my name erik?

Yearbook: Yeah

Erik: Erik

Yearbook: Alright thats cool. What would your spirit animal be?

Erik: interesting question

30 second guitar solo

Erik: Oh sorry I got distracted... My spirit animal is... obviously... a house cat.

Yearbook: A house cat? I guess thats pretty cool! What's the most exotic fruit you've ever eaten?

Erik: The most exotic fruit?

Yearbook: Yeah

Erik: That's a weird question... I'm gonna say cloudberries, from Norway.

Yearbook: That's crazy. Would you rather fall down three flights of stairs or two stories of an elevator shaft?

Erik: Three flights of stairs or two elevator shafts.

Yearbook: Haha just like two stories, you're on the second floor and...

Erik: Stairs dude, obviously...

Yearbook: Definitely fall down the stairs, okay. What's the square root of 324?

Erik: 324?

Yearbook: yea...

Erik: I'm gonna say... I think its potato... Do I have to answe this question?

Yearbook: It's 18.

Erik: Alright i knew it was in the teens. Yearbook: Alright that's something good. I have a riddle for you. What's brown and sticky?

Erik: Excuse me?

Yearbook: What's brown and sticky?

Erik: Chocolate? I don't know.

Yearbook: A stick!

Erik: Alright sticks are normally grey but keep going.

Yearbook: Whats red and smells like blue paint?

Erik: Blue paint.

Yearbook: No whats RED and smells like blue paint?

Erik: RED PAINT!

Yearbook: Exactly!

Erik: Next question.

Yearbook: No we're done here...

KELSEY MOREIS

Yearbook: What's your name?
Kelsey: Kelsey
Yearbook: What's the worst thing about MVRHS?
Kelsey: Um what's the worst thing? Probably the food.
Yearbook: Okay what's your pet peeve?
Kelsey: I don't know. I'm bad at interviews.
Yearbook: Just what do you hate?
Kelsey: I hate homework.
(Interject from Bailey): No Kelsey you hate when like people make plans with you....
Kelsey: Oh yeah when people make plans with you and then they ditch.
(Laughing)
Yearbook: What's your spirit animal?
Kelsey: I like Cats.
Yearbook: Um what's your favorite store?
Kelsey: The Green Room

RUSSELL SHAPIRO

Yearbook: Excuse me sir what's your name?
Russell: I don't wanna tell you.
Yearbook: Russell, okay do you have a nickname?
Russell: I don't.
Yearbook: Favorite T.V. show?
Russell: I do, Breaking Bad.
Yearbook: Okay, why?
Russell: It's just a well done T.V. show, very intense.
Yearbook: Most useless talent?
Russell: I don't know
Yearbook: Like Ellie can fit her fist in her mouth
Russell: What the heck... no I don't have a useless talent. (CONTINUED ON TOP)

Yearbook: What's your spirit animal?
Russell: ..my what?
Yearbook: Spirit animal?
Russell: What the heck does that even mean?
Yearbook: Like what do you feel like you are inside.
Russell: An eagle.
Yearbook: Why?
Russell:It's majestic.
Yearbook: Most proud moment?
Russell: Oh god.. I have too many.
Yearbook: What about when you won the spelling bee?
Russell: No definitely not that.. far from that Yearbook: Most embarrassing moment?
Russell: Hmm..
Yearbook: Just say it, just say it.
Russell: Well there was one embarrassing moment this weekend but I won't go into detail.
Yearbook: Biggest pet peeve?
Russell: Biggest pet peeve, I have too many. Alright I'm gonna be honest... whiny voices.
Yearbook: Is that aimed towards me...? First thing on your bucket list?
Russell: Uhh.. Sky diving
Yearbook: Favorite hair color?
Russell: Bright pink!
Yearbook: Russell if you could have one superpower what would it be?
Russell: To make people I don't like disappear. (laughing)
Yearbook: Thank you Russell.

New principal brings new principles

BY OLIVIA JACOBS

There's a new principal in town--and his name is Gilbert Traverso. He is already having a positive effect on the students and faculty at the regional high school.

Mr. Gilbert Traverso accepted the position this fall after four years as principal of Putnam Academy in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Mr. Traverso plans to connect with the students on a personal level. "I always try to be at student functions. I like to interact with all the students in hallways, classrooms, and at sporting events. I like to know names and I have been to as many home games as possible so far. I really like to see students in their comfort zone because I appreciate their other talents. Every faculty meeting I have will start off with a student performance. This morning, Addison Geiger performed a song he wrote and played it on the guitar. It was great. Even though I have lots of meet ings and paperwork, I'm not going to put that before a student who is in need."

Senior Zana Van Rooyen spoke highly of the new principal. She said, "Mr. Traverso is the most positive addition to the school that I have experienced in my three years here. I have only heard him say encouraging words. Every time I see him, he gives me a high five and that's wonderful. Mr. Traverso is approachable and is willing to talk about anything students have to say."

Mr. Traverso said of the Island and regional high school, "When I drive to work, I purposefully drive the longer way because its beautiful and relaxing. I like the sense of community here, and that we are very open to diversity. Everyone is truly invested in making sure this is a high performing school."

Assistant principal Elliott Bennett, who works closely with Mr. Traverso, said, "The new principal is like a breath of fresh air. He has a very student-oriented philosophy and is a skilled leader. Some of the projects Mr. Traverso and I are working on are the climate of the school, the teacher evaluation system, and improvements to the building itself. A big project is improving the alternate education rooms."

Mr. Traverso has many plans to improve the Career Technical Education (CTE) program at the high school. The program aims to provide students with an opportunity to pursue a career in the community that exists, and to enhance their understanding of academics. Putnam Academy, Mr. Traverso's previous school, was purely CTE based. The principal said, "I am taking two of our CTE teachers to my old school for the entire day on Friday, October 10. This is so they see some high performing programs and have an understanding of what career technical education is all about. There are so many ways we could use the algebraic equations in carpentry, so we want to expand these and integrate our CTE with academics here."

CTE program director Ty Hobbs said, "Mr. Traverso is very supportive of continuously improving our CTE programs. He's invested in teacher professional development and getting the shop refurbished."

Mr. Traverso reflected on his shift from Putnam Academy. "What I miss most about my previous school is that I built the entire program there, so I knew every aspect of the building. I knew so many families, kids, and community members. I'm sure that will eventually take place here too. I miss those connections because I'm a people person."

Senior Josie Iadicicco said, "Not only does Mr. Traverso have a great sense of humor and is incredibly kind, but he really wants what is best for our school. I already see changes in the school's overall environment--happier staff, students, and parents. I have a good feeling about his influence on our school and the improvements that will come with his new position."

Mr. Traverso's top three priorities for the school and its students are "to de-stress everyone, to make sure we are a safe school where students can achieve, and to enhance and continue in our established academic successes."

Josie continued, "Last year, I gave tours to the two principal candidates. During Mr. Traverso's tour, he told me that whenever he was having a bad day, he would step outside his office and interact with the students--just being around them made his day better. I believe he is truly concerned with the student body and our needs as much as he is with the rules and regulations of the school."

Blood drive collects lifesaving pints

BY CHRISTOPHER ARING

Dozens of students and staff donated a record-setting number of pints of blood last Thursday in a staging area set up in the regional high school's Performing Arts Center lobby.

The school's Student Council, its advisor, history teacher Olsen Houghton, and the American Red Cross collaborated to organize the drive, which was held during the school day. Thirty-four students and teachers donated a total of 37 pints of blood, topping last fall's total amount.

Junior Marlla Lemos said, "I donated because it is an easy way to help many people, in a big way." Marlla chose the Double Red Cell blood donation type where an apheresis machine collects the red cells and returns most of the plasma and platelets to the donor. By choosing this method, Marlla donated two pints of blood instead of the usual one pint which took an extra 30 minutes to complete. "If they were going to stick me with a needle anyway, I might as well give double the blood in one donation, she said."

Senior and student council president Josie Iadicicco was in charge of the blood drive and helped gather volunteers and create an organized and successful event. Josie said, "I was happy to help because I knew that organizing a strong team of volunteers and donors meant more people would receive the help they needed."

Junior Kyra Whalen volunteered for the blood drive but was unable to donate blood because of a field hockey game. She said, "I was a little upset that I could not donate blood, but I am going to try to donate blood in the spring."

Marlla said, "I think it brings the community together because everyone is helping people they don't know. It makes me feel that if I were to need help, the community would be there for me."

Student engineers present talk

BY AUGUST WELLES

For the first time in the regional high school's history, students and teachers recently attended the New York Maker Faire at the New York Hall of Science in Queens.

The Maker Faire, which is most widely known by its slogan—The Greatest Show and Tell on Earth-— is an event held by Make Media, a company responsible for an abundance of innovation-driven projects. The Maker Faire gives students and adults a chance to showcase their designs, learn about mechanics, and meet creative minds from all around the world.

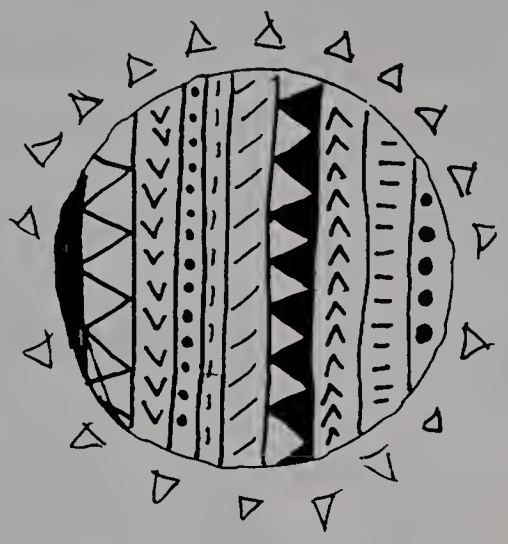

Last year, a group of students created an electric kart for the Cape Cod Mini Maker Faire and after the positive response, the students signed up for a talk at the Maker Faire in New York. Their talk was accepted, and at the end of the Maker Faire, they received an Editors Choice Award.

The students involved were seniors Calhoun Howard, Willow Wunsch, Kevin Montambault, junior Christopher Aring, and sophomores Brahmin Thurber-Carbone and Kate Sudarsky. The faculty advisors were emerging technologies teacher Chris Connors, and mathematics teacher Marylee Carlomagno.

A new kart design is also in the works by the students. Brahmin said, "The new kart is really funny looking. The Innovation Club is planning on making a new car from scratch, even the brushless DC motor and frame."

Faculty advisor Mr. Connors said, "I think it's an important thing for students to talk about their projects to people they don't know. It helps them to clarify what they have done and what other people think about what they have accomplished."

L3D Cube lights up the future

BY CHRIS ARING

Recently the chief technology officer of the digital-space innovation company Looking Glass, Alex Hornstein, visited the high school to present the L3D Cube. The L3D Cube reacts to sound, creates virtual displays, and is largely interactive. One of its main features is allowing for anyone in the world to upload their code to the website for others to download. He presented the cube in the classroom of Chris Connors, computer technologies teacher, for two periods and an hour-long session after school.

Junior Dustin McCord said, "I thought the cube was really interesting because of all the things it could do. It made me think about technology and what it could be like in the future."

It took weeks to get the cube transferred into a realistic prototype from a design, Mr. Hornstein said. "We started off with static prints, but people wanted to see them move, so we decided to make a 3D display. We did a lot of the work on our own because we knew it would be constantly changing. After three weeks, we had a prototype that we thought was marketable."

Mr. Connors said, "It's valuable for students to work with innovative projects and for them to realize that there are real people behind them. It's useful for students to realize that they can get involved in interesting projects before the public gets access to them."

It was the first time that the cube had ever been displayed at a school, and to such a large group for an extended period, Mr. Hornstein said: "It was interesting because we were able to get feedback that we wouldn't normally be able to get. There was such a large and diverse group." Mr. Hornstein saw how people interacted with the cube, which led to some modification: "After seeing how the students interacted with the cube, we released a new version of the library."

Senior Cal Howard said, "I was mesmerized. As an aspiring electrical engineering student, I immediately began deconstructing it in my mind in order to figure out how it works." HSV

Blood drive succeeds

BY CASEY MCANDREWS

About 84 lives were saved at the high school on Monday. For each of the 28 students and faculty members that donated blood in the American Red Cross blood drive last Monday, three lives may be saved for each pint donated, according to Red Cross officials.

Student Council President and senior Josie Iadicicco was the power behind the organization of the drive. She said, "The American Red Cross provides a schedule telling us when they can come, and then we allow the students to sign up during lunch hours." Explaining how such a simple task can make a large impact, Josie said, "It's good to show people the need for blood. It's eye-opening to the students. Many don't realize the importance that it has."

Other members of the Student Council donated their time to help with the blood drive, either sitting at tables during lunch to help students sign up or checking them in at the blood drive. They also made sure to keep the donors hydrated and eating enough food before and after they donated. "It was great to see all of the Student Council, and even the people who are not part of Student Council, show up and take charge organizing, signing kids up, and checking IDs."

Olsen Houghton, a history teacher and Student Council faculty adviser, also commented on the importance of the high school students getting involved in blood drives. "There is a constant need for blood, and the high school supplies a different part of the community to help," he said. "The goal of having this blood drive is to get the students to donate. Out of the 28 donors, only five were faculty members." The Student Council tries to do two blood drives every year. Last fall, the record for the most donors at a high school blood drive was broken, approaching nearly 35 pints of blood. "Our goal for this blood drive was to reach 40 pints of blood," Mr. Houghton said. "We didn't come close to that this year, but the main reason for that is because students who are currently playing a spring sport aren't able to donate."

Three lives may be saved for each pint donated, according to Red Cross officials.

One of the Mobile Unit Assistants from the American Red Cross, Tom Flanagan, commented on how a school drive impacts the community. "More blood is donated from school drives than drives anywhere in the state."

Junior Kyra Whalen spent her entire school day helping out at the blood drive. She signed people in and made sure that they were hydrated and had eaten breakfast. She said, "Participating in the blood drive allows the Student Council to actively support the Red Cross and do something that benefits the community."

Senior Megan Bischoff is a veteran blood donor. She said, "If I'm able to help, why shouldn't I? I'm also a universal donor, so I plan on donating again." HSV

Steering young drivers in the right direction

BY PHILIP MOREIS, KENNY HAMMOND, JEFFREY CIMENO, JOSEPH PINTO, AND OLIVIA JACOBS

The high school's Driver's Education program is led by two passionate teachers who believe in what they do: Neal Maciel and Mike Delis. Both are retired police officers.

Mr. Delis was an officer for 12 years in the Edgartown Police Department before he retired due to an injury while on duty. Mr. Maciel was a police officer for 35 years before he wanted to run for Dukes County sheriff. He had to retire because it is against the rules to be a politician and an officer. Mr. Maciel and Mr. Delis were contacted by Martha's Vineyard Drive for Life (MVDFL), which helped them decide to become instructors.

Mr. Delis has been teaching the Driver's Ed program for about five years now. He loves to work with teens and watch them learn how to become safer drivers. Eleventh grader Cameron Maciel, one of Mr. Delis' students, said, "I really enjoy the class, and my favorite thing to do is watch videos about driving." Mr. Delis went to Cape Cod Community College and Westfield State. When Mr. Delis was a young boy at his father's restaurant, a few officers would come by and eat. At the time, his parents would allow him to drive in the back seat of a police car back to return home. He liked the fact that the police officers would let him turn on the police lights.

Mr. Delis said, "That heavily influenced me to become an officer."

Lena Hanschka, a sophomore who took the driver's education course at the high school, gave it high marks. She said, "I liked learning something that I know I will use. That made it more interesting. I definitely think the program is an asset to the school. Mike and Neil made the class as interesting as possible."

Mr. Maciel has been teaching Driver's Ed since January 2011. His favorite thing to do is work with teens. He went to school at Cape Cod Community College, UMass Dartmouth, and UMass Lowell. Mr. Maciel said, "I had a hard time trying to get my degree, due to my working as a police officer and going to college." After that, he decided to attend the police academy because one of his friends got into a fatal car crash. Mr. Maciel was going to a party with his friends from another party. On the way, one of his friends was drunk, and drove ahead of them around a corner. Mr. Maciel and his friends went around the corner and didn't see their friend's car. So they went back to check for him, and found his car torn in half in the middle of a field. They eventually found their friend's body next to a house, with his neck broken. Mr. Maciel said, "That was a big motivator for me to become an officer."

Erin Hill, also a sophomore who has completed the driver's education program, said, "From Driver's Ed, I got everything I needed to know to be ready to get out on the roads and be a safe, defensive, and successful driver. Mike and Neil are great teachers and are vital to the program. They always guide us on the path of success and end up making us better drivers in the long run."

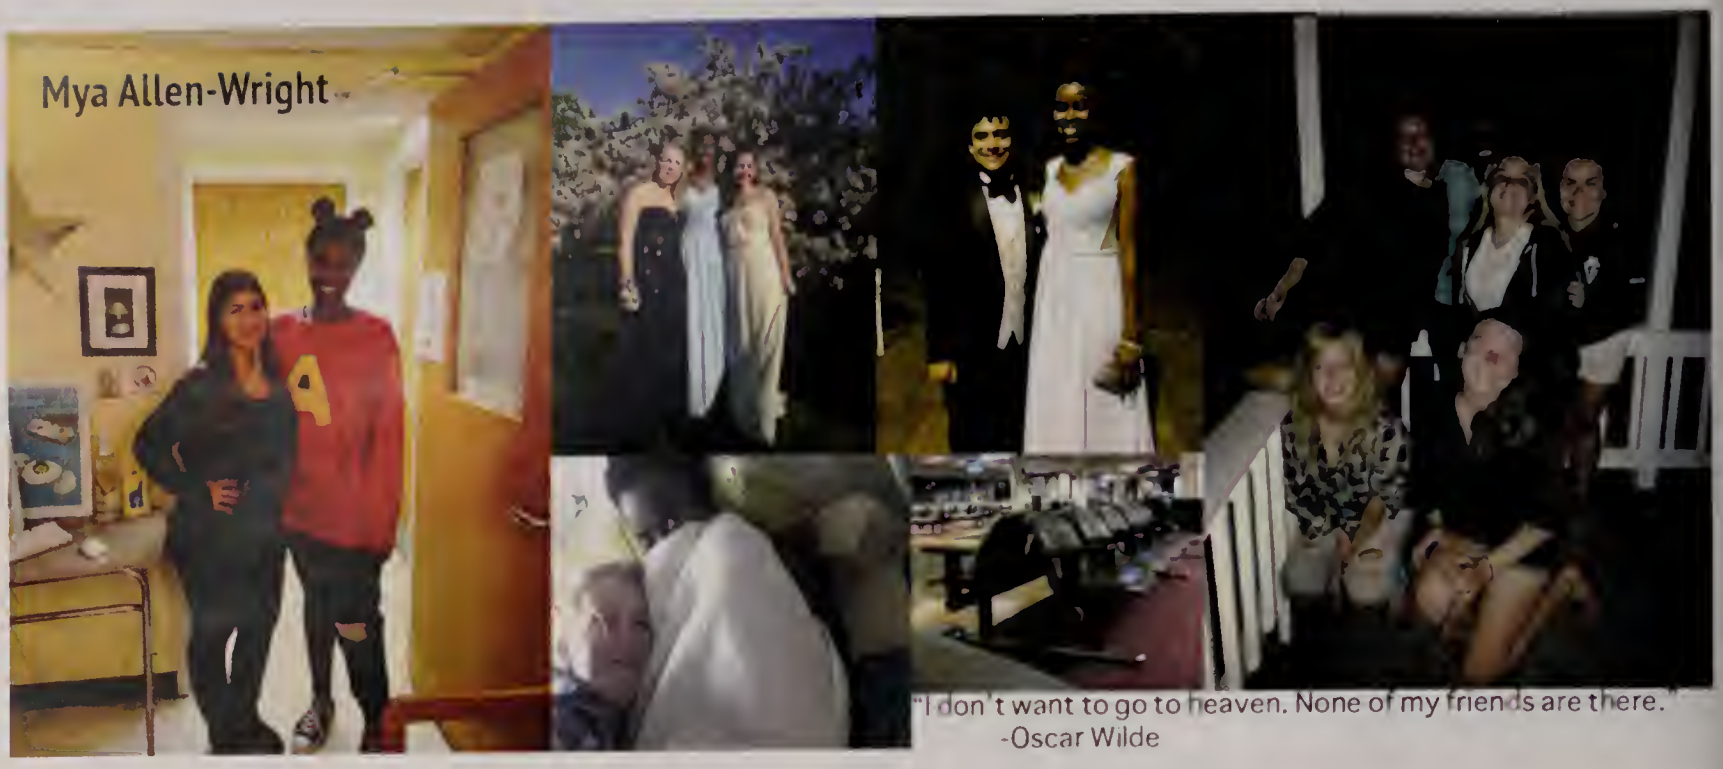

Both Mr. Maciel and Mr. Delis say they are proud to see the students they taught driving on the Island roads safely. HSV

CONGRATULATIONS SEROGIA!

The first few were in the arctic circle and the next twelve were here in the Atlantic Ocean. May the next several find you (regardless of where you are) in your heart, learning your way along, living your dreams told and untold, being true to your calling, and really being loyal to the one and only SERGE. Don't let anything or anyone hold you back from your unlimited potential. Remember that we love you, we believe in you, and we see the wonderful young man that you are. Congratulations on your High School Graduation!

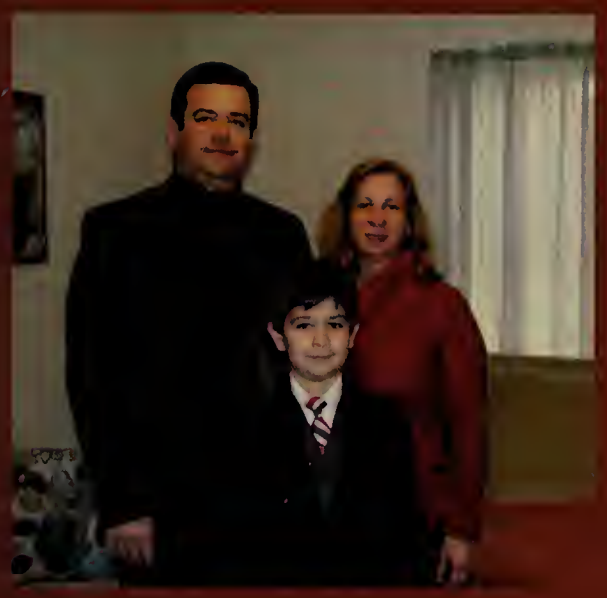

Love you more - Dad, Mom, Andre, Olya & Champ

"Congratulations Samia ! You did it ! But who lied to you that the hard work ends here ? It's only just begun ! Ha ha ha, but we are here for You and sure God will get You through. We love You.
Dad, Mom and Gabriel

Enjoy the Quest

Congratulations Grant!

Love Mom, Dad, & Max
